Xunliang Liu
Postdoctoral Research Associate
Center for Applied Genetic Technologies

I am a postdoc in Dr. Melissa Mitchum's lab in the Department of Plant Pathology and Institute of Plant Breeding, Genetics, and Genomics at University of Georgia. I received my Ph.D. in Plant Biology from the Shanghai Institute of Plant Physiology and Ecology in 2012. Before joining Dr. Mitchum's lab, I completed a postdoctoral training at the University of Arizona focusing on aspects of cell-to-cell signaling during plant reproduction. I am interested in the molecular interaction between plant parasitic nematode and their host. I am current working on elucidating the downstream components of CLE peptide signaling pathways involved in cyst nematode feeding site formation.
